Underground Railroad

- 1 Buxton National Historic Site & Museum
- 2 Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society
- 3 Uncle Tom's Cabin Historic Site

Chatham-Kent once proudly served as a premier destination for fugitive slaves seeking their freedom and a better life.

The Underground Railroad was a secret network of people who helped African Americans escape from enslavement in the American South to free Northern states or to Canada. It was the largest anti-slavery freedom movement in North America, having brought between 30,000 and 40,000 fugitive slaves to Canada.

Today, Buxton National Historic Site & Museum, the Chatham-Kent Black Historical Society and Uncle Tom's Cabin Historical Site all serve as windows into the past. Each site allows visitors to touch, feel, see, and hear the stories of those who took heroic journeys, following the North Star to freedom in Chatham-Kent.
